UI student placed on probation

The Press-Citizen

Bruce Nestor, a University of Iowa student, was placed on probation for his part in an anti-CIA protest at the Iowa Memorial Union last October.

Nestor, one of at least three students accused of violating regulations of UI's Code of Student Life, was found guilty of four charges by UI hearing officer Susan Mask.

Mask said Nestor will remain on probation until the end of this semester. Nestor was charged after he participated in a demonstration protesting the on-campus recruiting activities of CIA representatives.

Nestor was the only student to take his case to an administrative hearing.

The other two students accused of misconduct settled their cases informally with UI administrators.
